

Because these are continuous distributions and entropy is a measure of uncertainty for discrete random variables, the continuous variates were first binned and then converted to probabilities.